Southern Coalition for Social Justice

Edgecombe County Cooperative Extension is teaming up with the Southern Coalition for Social Justice to bring another “free” will writing clinic to the residents of Edgecombe County.

“The Southern Coalition for Social Justice is a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization founded in August, 2007 in Durham, North Carolina by a multi-disciplinary group, predominantly people of color, who believe that families and communities engaged in social justice struggles need a team of lawyers, social scientists, community organizers and media specialists to support them . . .”

After an enthusiastic response to the first three clinics, the Coalition has agreed to return to Edgecombe County on July 16th and 17th to conduct another workshop where participants can have ‘Wills,’ “Living Wills,” “Health Care Power of Attorneys” and “Durable Power of Attorneys” drafted at no charge.

Edgecombe County Cooperative Extension developed a working relationship with the Coalition in the Spring of 2010 while discussing the concern of “Heirs’ Property” to area agriculture.

Heirs’ Property results in fragmentation of land tracts which can have a significant and detrimental effect on area agriculture; especially on the productive farmland of Edgecombe county which provides food and fiber. In an attempt to educate citizens on this and other challenges that can develop when “End of Life” documents are missing, we encourage you to participate.

Quick Facts:

- This clinic is designed for individuals with less than $150,000 of total assets
- The legal team can help individuals with a simple estate, requiring a basic will.
- Documents will be signed, notarized and ready for filing.
